Thank you for your interest in Everett Youth Symphony.

The purpose of any youth symphony is to provide instruction and performance opportunities to young musicians which will enhance their musical education. Because we view participation in a youth symphony as an extension of your musical studies, it is important that you continue them, both in school and, if possible, through private instruction. Everett Youth Symphony works hand in hand with the school districts to ensure that music education is accessible to all students. Our school music program participation policy is one way our organization strives to keep music a vibrant part of our community.

It is required that you become involved in your school music program. Not only will you benefit from the additional instruction and performance time, but you will be forging relationships with other musically minded students. It's a great way to build friendships that could last a lifetime.

Unless you have a compelling reason supported by the school music director, we cannot waive the policy. Talk with the music director at your school and see what opportunities are available to you. Discuss your concerns and passion for music. Speak to the director about your desire to join the symphony. When that is done, let us know the outcome of your discussions, because we would be honored and blessed to have you become part of EYSO.
